

Working Farms and Forests

Most of the food in New Hampshire grocery stores is produced in and shipped from California. Rising energy costs will make it more expensive to ship food to New Hampshire. Local farms, like this low bush blueberry farm on Tibbetts Hill Road, produce fresher foods. Purchasing foods grown locally also helps keep local dollars within the community.